The first edition of this book listed numerous individuals and institutions who provided useful information and other support — particularly during our various field trips when we gathered the material upon which that book was based. The book would not have been possible without their support. While it is not possible to reprint that entire list, we do want to call attention to those who were instrumental in helping us produce this second edition.

Dozens of people have contributed to this new edition in diverse ways, including case studies, data, news items, book and article references, conference presentations, correspondence, photos, and collaboration in related activities.

The authors wish first and foremost to thank five people who have contributed at many levels — conceptually, substantively, and emotionally:

- Anthony Brunetti, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada
- Margaret Hoven, Mount Pleasant, Washington, D.C., USA
- Peter Matlon, Rockefeller Foundation (formerly with UNDP/SEED), New York, New York, USA
- Jonas Rabinovitch, UNDP/MDGD, New York, New York, USA
- Seth Beckerman, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, USA

Several professionals have been exceptionally constructive in their contributions to this document through their reviews and comments:

- Isaac Akinyele, Food Basket Foundation, Ibadan, Nigeria
- François Coutu, formerly at UNDP, New York, USA
- Andres Dasso, REDE, Lima, Peru
- Steven A. Esrey, UNICEF, New York, USA
- Chris Furedy, York University, York, Ontario, Canada
- Herbert Girardet, Schumacher Society, UK
- Liz Graham, Institute of Archaeology, London, UK
- Petra Jacobi, UVPP/GTZ, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania
- Shubh Kumar-Range, Consultant, Washington, D.C., USA
- Mike Levenston, CityFarmer, Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada
- Daniel Maxwell, CARE International, Nairobi, Kenya

Acknowledgements

- Rachel Nugent, formerly at FAO, Rome, Italy
- Carl Taylor, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland, USA
